RESPECT LIFE

Marriage and the family cannot be considered a mere product of historical circumstances or a superstructure imposed from outside of human love. On the contrary, they are an inner need of this love to fulfill itself in its own truth and in the fullness of the reciprocal gift of self. Even those features of spousal union that today are all too often misunderstood or rejected, such as unity, indissolubility and openness to life, are instead requests for the authenticity of the covenant of love. It is in this very way that the bond which unites the man and the woman becomes an image and symbol of the covenant between God and his People, which finds its definitive fulfillment in Jesus Christ. (Pope John Paul II)
